The Cazotte Family.

Sevola Cazotte is the name of an aged Frenchman who died at Paris on the 21st June last, aged ninety-one years. In his youth he came to America as a soldier in the French armed expedition under Count d'Estaing, which besieged Savannah during our Ravalution.

He was also appointed to the superintendence of the library at the Palace of Verseilles, which office he lost after the revolution of 1830. He preserved his faculties clear and active to his last breath, and left one son and three daughters.

His father, J. Cazotte, was one of the most facile and popular literary men of the eighteenth century. He was at first in government employ century. He was at first in government employ in the marine, and was for some time in Martinique, in an important office. He soon returned to France, and thenceforth devoted himself to hterature. He wrote verse with astonishing facility, and some of his productions were of such merit that they were attributed to Voltaire. He was the author, also, of "Arab Tales," a continuation of the celebrated "Arabian Nights' Entertainments," net long before translated and published in France for the first time. The continuation exhibited a great deal of imaginative power, and was very popular. and was very popular.

Towards the close of his life he became a mem ber of the mystic sect of the "Illuminati." This society was founded in 1776 by Adam Weisshaupt, r of Canonical Law at the University society was founded in 1776 by Adam Weisshaupt, Professor of Canonical Law at the University of Ingolstadt in Bayaria.

The association was organized partly on the plan of the Society of Jesuits, (in whose institutions of learning the founder had studied,) and partly on that of the freemasons. Persons of all religious were admitted into the ranks of the new society, the declared object of which was the amelioration of mankind by the cultivation of the purest sentiments of virtue and morality. At one time the association numbered two thousand members, and was in a very flourishing condition, when the founder attempted to extend its influence into public affairs. The government of Bavaria interfered, and in 1784 prohibited all such associations in its territories, and condemned the members of this to exile or prison; Weisshaupt took refuge at Gotha, the Duke of which was one of his adepts, and died there in 1822, with the title of Aulic Councillor.

J. Cazotte entered fully into all the extravagant mystic views of the sect, and became known for a ented to release him unharmed.

He was again arrested, however, in a few days, and was guillotined on the 25th September, exhibiting to the last the most philosophic courage. Many of our readers will doubtless remember the thrillof our readers will doubtless remember the thrilling story related by La Harpe, the celebrated French litterateur, of a private banquet among a number of eminent literary and political personages at Paris sometime before the revolution broke out, and at which Cazotte, being rallied about his sombre humor, rose, and in a kind of dream or hallucination, delivered a fearful prophecy, telling of the revolution, the terrible fate of each guest and his own, and ending amid the general terror by hinting most distinctly at the end reserved for the very highest personages in France—Louis XVI. and Maria Antoinette.

Speed of the Arabia, yesterday, there was much contention among bystanders as to the speed of the Arabia and that of the Pacific. A group of seventy-five or one hundred persons, in front of the Atlantic Hotel, near the Cunard dock, took up the subject in earnest, and over $1,000, altogether, was staked upon the result of the present trips. The Pacific sailed on Saturday, 23d inst. trips. The Pacific sailed on Saturday, 23d inst., at 11 m., and the Arabia left yesterday, at 12 38 minutes.—New York Times, 28th.

The Street Preaching Excitement-Almost a Mob-Mayor's Address, &c.

Валлімони, July 28, 1853. The excitement prevailing in relation to the treet preaching arrest, which almost reached the repudiating the sentiments attributed to him, has quite turned the tables against them. The Mayor, in his address, declares his determination not to be intimidated, and calls upon the friends violence. The meeting stands adjourned to six clock this evening.

This old street preacher has made a habit for everal years past of preaching on temperance and to those enjoyed by school children of the pres and persons, has taken advantage of the religious excitement existing to be still more fanatical than heretofore. The Mayor, in ordering the police to stop him, believing that a continuation of his course would endanger the peace of the city, did nothing more than his duty. The fanatics, however, have taken the action of the Mayor against this one man and his offensive harangues to be a general determination to suppress the liberty of speech, and on this rallying cry have stirred up an excitement; hoping thereby to increase the ranks of the temperance and religious enthusiasts who hope to ride into office amid the split of po litical parties that they hope to create.

LOCAL MATTERS.

DISTRIBUTION OF PREMIUMS .- The male and female pupils of the public schools in the First District, to the number of probably five hundred, assembled in the Smithsonian Institution, yester under Count d'Estaing, which besieged Savannah during our Revolution.

On his return to France, when the revolution broke out there, he joined the Royalist party, and was of the escort that accompanied Louis XVI. in his unfortunate attempt to escape from France in disguise. On the famous day of the 10th August, 1792, when the King was declared to have conspicuous by his royalist exertions. He then left Paris and joined the regiment known as the "Royal Emigrant." He was in the fight at Hundschott and also in the perilous affair at Quiberon, on the coast of France, where the discembarked emigré force was cut to pieces by the famous General Hoche.

At the restoration of Louis XVIII. Cazotte received the appointment of lieutenant colonel in a feeling of indignation among our citizens, stars and stripes. The Board of Trustees of the day morning, on the occasion of the distribution due consideration, he would answer their request, and wore blue riband on the breast. Third District School .- The distribution of pre niums among the pupils of the schools embraced within this District took place yesterday afternoon at the Ebenezer Church, Navy Yard. About five hundred scholars were present. A scene similar to that above described was presented. The chil dren occupied the seats in the body of the church, while the galleries were filled with parents and friends, including teachers of other schools. The Mayor of the city presided, and near by him were Messrs. Randolph, Haliday, Harbaugh Ruff, Russell, Byington, Walsh, Abbot, and Secretary Davis, of the Board of School Trustees and Messrs. Clark and Miller, of the Common Council. An address, delivered by the Rev. Dr. Isaac Cole, was warmly received; it being of a charac ter in every way worthy of the occasion.

HORTICULTURAL AND FLORAL EXHIBITION. There were several new contributors yesterday Vegetables from the alms-house gardens were displayed for the first time-fine ones, too; the wild goose beans, not stringy, measured from twelve to twenty inches in length. The array of flowers was lovely, rare specimens from far countries blooming in rivalry to our floral natives. The design of these weekly exhibitions is to encourage the pursuits directly connected with the cultivation of the generous earth, which honestly remunerates in proportion to the toil bestowed upon it, and to disseminate information generally in relation to this important subject.

MILITARY SPIRIT .- Yesterday, two compani of youths paraded the streets, to the music of the drum and fife, the "stars and stripes" prominent in line. Their uniform was plain and neat, and their guns harmless. At a later period in the day, a number of boys, of smaller size, having their dormant military spirit wildly aroused by the display which they had just witnessed, forthwith proceeded to organize another company, and appointed a committee to solicit contributions towards martial music. It is not yet decided whether they will form a care her correwhether they will form a cavalry corps
